

Belize provides only a few wreck dive opportunities because many wrecked ships actually lodged atop the reef system above water instead of below.

There is also little chance of finding valuables but the following make for an interesting dive

- HMS Advice - Turneffe Atoll - This is the wreck of a British naval cutter which sunk to 16 feet on June 1, 1793.
- Sayonara in Turneffe Atoll - This former transport boat sits at 45 feet below the surface.

Just remember anything you find of value belongs to the state and cannot be kept.
